In Cases of Unconsciousness or Fainting,
First Learn Cause

By DR. MORRIS FISHBELN
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine.

What do you do when someone suddenly faints or becomes unconscious? Most people do the wrong thing. Fainting or unconsciousness may be due to an insufficient blood supply to the brain. Sometimes people become unconscious following a blow on the head; sometimes a small blood vessel in the brain will burst, and the pressure on the brain from the blood clot will bring on unconsciousness; sometimes people lose consciousness because they have inhaled a poisonous gas or an anesthetic, such as opium, ether, or chloroform. In other cases, people become unconscious because there is too much blood in the brain. Finally, there are people who become dizzy because of some disturbance of the balance sense in the body. These people also may fall unconscious.

Obviously, it is of the greatest importance to know why the person has lost consciousness, and to take the emergency steps that may be necessary to save life after the cause is properly determined.

The doctor attending an unconscious person will first determine the rate and strength of the pulse, to see how the condition is affecting the circulation of the blood. If the pulse rate is between 75 and 90 and strong, he realizes that there is no immediate danger of death from failure of the circulation.

He will, however, also listen to the heart to determine whether its sounds are correct. He will study the color of the face. If there is great pallor, blueness, or a purple color, he will realize that there is something wrong with the blood. In carbon monoxide poisoning, a purple color is present. In asphyxiation, the skin is blue. In unconsciousness due to shock, the face may be very pale.

The doctor will see if the skin is hot or cold, and determine the presence of perspiration. He will look at the eyes to see if the pupils are equal or unequal in size, and if they are dilated or contracted. Poisonous drugs have varying effects on the size of the eye pupils. Unequal size of the pupils is a sign of injury to the brain, such as brain hemorrhage.

The doctor will examine the surface of the scalp to see whether the skull has been injured. A fracture of the skull or a crushing injury beneath the skin will of course, cause unconsciousness.

In very hot weather, or in the case of people who work in foundries, kitchens, or laundries, sunstroke and heatstroke may be responsible for unconsciousness.

Your Children

By Olive Roberts Barton

A Child, A Car—And Sudden Death

Much has been broadcast about safety for children on the road, so this is addressed particularly to those who think that nothing can happen to them or their families, although they may not heed.

Last night's paper gave an account of a "night" death. The child was walking on the road and the driver said he couldn't see, because the lights of an oncoming car blinded him. I know that everyone who read that, shivered. Every decent driver sits tensely at his wheel at night, or even in the twilight, because he never knows when, around a curve or over the brow of a hill, he will suddenly meet a pedestrian. If there is no curve or no rise, another car with lamps shining in his eyes, pulls a blank over vision quite as effectively.

This summer, we, who drive as carefully as anyone could, have had shock after shock of this kind. One night we met a family, father, mother and four little children, all strung out on the road outside a small town. They never will know how close they came to death; that they were entirely invisible to us until we were within forty feet of them. On the other lane were dozens of approaching cars, and to have swerved, even if there had been time, would have been a shambles.

Misleading Signs

How we saved them, I do not know. They did not so much as step one foot out of the way. Facing us, they could see us come, but either they did not know the danger, or were misled by signs all through the district, which said, "Walk on the left side of the road, facing traffic." Inside of five minutes, we met another group, three boys, arm-in-arm, happily oblivious to death. This is why I think the natives of that stretch of country were pinning their hope of long life on those signs.

The signs are all right. It is safer to face traffic than to turn one's back, of course. But the wording is too assuring. A line should be added to walk beside the road, not on it, after dark. The day will come, and should be here, when sidewalks flank all roads. Most roads have level, hard "shoulders," which provide average footing, except in wet weather; but the temptation is to keep to concrete.

Pedestrians' Rights Abridged

I am not rooting for the motorist. Pedestrians have too few rights. But it is worse than denying lightning or artillery, to disregard the only life one has for the sake of principle.

After the sun goes down, at dusk as well as in the deeper dark, no driver is better than half-a-driver when the lights of approaching cars shine in his eyes. All should "dip" their beams, but here we have the lazy ones who let you do all the dimming while they go murderously on their way.

So I urge every parent to tell children to double their caution after supper. To think of any car with lights coming their way, as sudden death. To give it as wide a berth as an express train, and wider. I pray daily that the whole system of car-vision at night may be changed. The present idea is at worst, inefficient and even vicious. Where are the experts on such things?

HOLLYWOOD

By ERSKINE JOHNSON NEA Service Staff Correspondent

"Spanky" Gets Spanked; But Not Other Starlets

EDITOR'S NOTE: During Paul Harrison's vacation, his column, "In Hollywood," will be conducted by Erskine Johnson, of NEA's Hollywood Bureau.

HOLLYWOOD—With one exception, rascals and papas of Hollywood's baby stars agree with New York psychologists who decided recently that spanking children is injurious. Spanky McFarland does get spanked. But not the others: Shirley Temple, Jane Withers, Freddie Bartholomew, Jackie Cooper, Virginia Weilder, Sybil Jason, Edith Fellows, or Baby Jane Quigley.

It's a cinch some of these kids deserve good lickings now and then, but the respective parents shudder at the very thought.

Perhaps even the slightest idea of whipping a family bratwinner, who earns more than a lot of bank presidents, would cause conscience trouble.

But this reason, of course, isn't screened when the fond parents of the screen's starlets give their anti-spanking views.

The Manhattan psychologists said that corporal punishment for a child resulted in stubbornness, lack of intelligence, and misunderstanding of the difference between right and wrong. Hollywood's proud parents think along similar lines. With the exception, of course, of young Mr. McFarland's mama.

Says Mrs. McFarland, mincing no words: "Spanky gets spanked when he deserves it. I don't see anything wrong with it."

The other mamas go to great lengths explaining just why they don't spank their famous offspring.

Reasons With Shirley

Says Shirley Temple's mother: "I do not spank Shirley and have never spanked her. Shirley is a person with whom one can reason. She understands why she is asked to do certain things and asked not to do others. It would be an insult to Shirley and a violation of her personality to enforce obedience by physical punishment."

Says Jane Withers' mother: "Jane gets no spankings. I have never believed in bringing up children by means of the rod, or the ever-ready punishing palm. If punishment is necessary, Jane is far more deeply affected by the prospect of being deprived of something she likes to do than she would be by the fear of blows."

Says Freddie Untidy

Says Freddie Bartholomew's aunt, Mylicent:

"Freddie doesn't get spanked. I am not opposed to spanking, but think it seldom brings the desired results. I have stressed the moral side of his upbringing and he is quite convinced that wrongdoing brings its own punishment. My principal fault is untidiness, but I haven't been able to find any effective way to correct that yet."

Says Jackie Cooper's mother:

"When Jackie requires correction, a good 'bawling out' usually accomplishes the desired effect. Cancellation of something he has been looking forward to is his worst punishment."

Child Enjoys Spanking?

Says Baby Jane Quigley's mother: "Spanking fails to accomplish its purpose. Usually it is just an emotional outlet for the parent. A child often does naughty things just for the purpose of attracting attention, and spanking only provides a dramatic climax which the child may actually enjoy. Baby Jane is confined to her own room when she's bad."

Says Mrs. Elizabeth Fellows, grandmother of Edith Fellows:

"Edith has never been spanked. I've reared her since she was six weeks old. If she does anything of which I disapprove, I quietly take her aside and point out that such an action may cause others to dislike her. She wants everyone to like her. Thus, my reasoning plan has always proved effective."

Stars Withhold Rod

Likewise, few if any of the sons and daughters of the screen's great suffer good, old-fashioned spankings, or even slight palm whackings.

Hollywoodites have to keep up a good front. Fans wouldn't like it, for example, if it got around that demure Sally Andrews looked the tar out of her kids.

As a result, Hollywood's children are deprived of certain things, such as gold-plated toy soldiers, when they're bad. But many of 'em are spoiled, just the same.

TRANS-PACIFIC FLIGHT

BY DECK MORGAN

© 1936, NEA Service, Inc.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

KAY DUNN, pretty airplane stewardess, falls in love with TED GRAHAM, veteran pilot who flies the trans-Pacific route.

Ted has two interests in life—his job and DICKIE, his adopted son, 7 years old. When Ted tells Kay to marry him, she fears it is merely to make a home for Dickie, but she agrees.

She does not agree, though, with Ted's theories that marriage, to be successful, must be planned scientifically, just as a plane flight. She is rebellious because he insists her housekeeping must be carried on in the same way, with charts and budgets.

Kay goes with a crowd of friends to dance one night and hears Ted's name linked with that of ROSALIND KRUGER, a wealthy heiress who frequently travels Ted's route.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XIX

KAY'S faith in Ted was not shaken by the gossip she had heard the night she danced with Monte. After the shock of the words had passed she realized that she would have to make readjustments, and face such things calmly.

For Ted lived an international life. On the trans-Pacific route, because of the very nature of his job, he met countless people whose names made news.

But struggling against Kay's own nature made her restless. She wanted to be going places, doing something all the time.

Ted met such moods with an air of indulgence that caused another quarrel between them, ending in tears and then reconciliation.

She didn't go to the landing to see him come in when his ship arrived next. She had heard that Illah was aboard and she didn't want to face her.

The Mariner alighted on the waters of Ship Harbor toward dusk. At that moment Kay sat patiently at the telephone in her home, dialing one number after another. If Ted wanted a gay life in foreign ports she would give him one when he was ashore! She could play his game, too, and she would.

SHE invited to their home that night all of the hangers-on about the airport—people who had no part in the enterprise, but lived in the aviation colony to share the excitement and glamour.

Many in the crowd had read about Ted Graham's exploits, but had never met him. They had read, too, about the notorious dancer, Illah, who had come in on the plane. They wondered if she'd be at the party that night, hoped so, and whispered about it eagerly.

They all came, and they were on time. Toward 10 o'clock the three rooms which had been thrown open to guests were filled, and people had begun to take possession of the porches and even the kitchen.

Ted was a little bewildered at the sight. He had come home late for dinner and found that the guests had already begun to arrive. The members of the army crowd were strangers to him. Nobody bothered to introduce him, but he supposed they were Kay's friends.

He was tired and sleepy and, at last, retired to his den, but some of the men had already taken possession of it. They were shooting dice on the floor and didn't even look up when Ted came in. A woman hurried after him and caught his arm.

"Ted Graham!" she exclaimed breathlessly. "Do tell me about that fascinating creature you brought in with you today on the plane. We read about her in the papers. Is she really a Eurasian?"

Ted laughed.

"I've seen her dance," Ted said. "And she dances remarkably well."

"Then I'm sorry she didn't come to your party. I came all the way from San Francisco just to see her!" Pique was written on the wrinkled jowls of the dowager's face.

THE whole evening, to Ted, was as grotesque as this one incident. The gaiety of the crowd was exaggerated.

Ted sought refuge from the brittle chatter at Kay's side, but she was in the center of an admiring throng and he couldn't seem to get in a word.

He went upstairs again and, finding his den empty, locked the door and went to bed. He was tired—dead tired. He had important work to do next day and in less than a minute he was sound asleep.

Kay had seen him go upstairs and she followed as soon as she was able to slip away. Finding the door locked, she knocked. There was no answer from within the room, which was dark, she knew. She tried the doorknob. "Locked!" she thought angrily. "He's asleep. The idea—insulting me by going to sleep during my party. While there are guests in the house!"

Ted's apparent indifference enraged her. "Asleep!" she stormed inwardly. "But he wasn't too tired to go out with Illah and that Rosalind Kruger in Honolulu. All right!"

She went downstairs again, joined in the fun even more gayly.

Kay's adventurous spirit had finally broken its bonds and Monte Blaine shared this mood. When it was proposed that they all go somewhere across the bay to continue the party, Kay was among the first to agree.

They went to one night club and then another. Gradually the crowd grew smaller. Couples began to depart, murmuring about the lateness of the hour. Ralph Bangs, who had been Doris's escort, had gone long before, but Doris was still in the crowd. Ralph had to go to Honolulu on the Mariner at 9 in the morning and Monte had promised to give him a call and wake him in time to reach the airport promptly.

AT last there were only the three of them left—Kay and Doris and Monte. They decided to stop for breakfast at a beach hotel and they stood on the beach, watching the sea lions come to life on the island rocks.

When they were tired of watching these antics, Kay, Doris and Monte went inside to order their toasted rolls, bacon and eggs and hot coffee.

Suddenly the sun came up out of the Pacific like a great fiery ball. The gorgeous spectacle made Kay's spirits soar again. She felt exuberantly young.

"All this time," she said bitterly to Doris, "I've been sitting primly at home, trying to learn to keep house scientifically, working over budgets and planning balanced meals and seeing to it that Dickie ate his spinach and got to bed promptly—and Ted's been having a good time! I was trying to build up a home, stone on stone, scientifically. But now I want to throw bricks!"

Monte arrived beside them to hear the last words. "Look out, gal!" he warned. "You'll take wings and fly if you don't watch out."

"I want to fly!" Kay said, almost tearfully. "I want to fly and fly—and fly—over the ocean." She concluded rebelliously, "Away from Ted!"

"You don't mean that," Doris told her. "Hush."

"But I do mean it!" Kay insisted. "I'll tell you what—" She stopped and gazed through the gathering mist of her tears toward the Pacific. "I'm going to take the morning plane to Honolulu. That's what I'm going to do. I'm going to fly and fly and fly—" "You're going home to bed," Doris said.

"No, no! I'm going to fly to Honolulu—with Monte!"

A Spirit-Lifting Tale of Provincial Love—Young's "Far Forest" Brings Flavor of English Heath

An unpretentious people who abide on one of those slatterily back lanes off the high road, and whose lives are confined to the circumstances of their narrow environment, seem not to offer much material for a fascinating story.

But they may, withal, as Francis Brett Young well proves in his "Far Forest" (Reynal and Hitchcock; $2.50).

The author has dipped his pen into the murky smog of industrial south-west England to inscribe the history of a provincial love—a splendid passion, forged in the chain shops of cursing, lustful Black Country men, and tempered in the cool, quiet streams of forest lands "across the ridge."

Born under the blight of an ancestry which is completely unsympathetic with their ideals, two children fight to throw off their shackles and drive toward different goals, to find, finally, that happiness is really only a compromise between what they strove for and what they already had.

There is no straining to unveil perfection; the mood throughout is that of untroubled life. Even those souls who prospect horizons beyond the Black Country find due penance to their destiny of sorridness.

Despite this darkening tone, "Far Forest" is spirit-lifting. Stark reality need not always connote tragedy; just as often, it means hope, laughter, triumphs. The unfolding of these finer elements provide the emotional climaxes.

That part of England which is the story's locale is Francis Brett Young's native country. He knows its streams, its hills and roads, and writes devotedly of them. It is, indeed, the persistent flavor of the heath and the he-pard which constrains one to return to this book to re-read its best pages.

Purgatory Subject of Dr. Otto Klink

Large Crowds Attending Revival Service at Gospel Tabernacle

A large crowd heard Dr. Otto Klink speak Tuesday night at the Hope Gospel Tabernacle on the subject, "Why I Believe in Purgatory."

He took all his scripture texts from the Doue version of the New Testament which is the Bible the Catholic church uses. He explained that purgatory is a place of cleansing and is derived from the word purge, meaning to cleanse. Dr. Klink proved from the scripture that the place of cleansing is Calvary, where a person is cleansed by faith in the blood of Christ.

Wednesday night he speaks on "The Second Coming of the Devil," and will answer such questions as, "Is there a Devil?" "What Causes the Devil?" "Is he a person?" and others.

Thursday night there will be a public Divine Healing service and Rev. Klink will speak on "Why I pray for the sick."

Great interest is being shown in this series of meetings by people from all denominations and a hearty invitation is extended to the general public to hear Dr. Klink.

School Lunch

From the standpoint of health, the school lunch is no more important than any other meal, but the difficulty comes in providing the right foods for this meal and in serving it in a wholesome setting.

In the rural school, where room and equipment are necessarily limited, a hot soup or hot drink may easily be prepared and served to supplement the cold lunch brought from home such as milk, creamed vegetable soup, vegetables, meat and vegetable stew, custard. Where no supplementary dish is served, each child should carry a bottle of milk.

Generally speaking, cold lunches are unappetizing and dry; so many times they are eaten as the children run around the school yard, which hinders digestion and lowers the vitality of the body. If a hot dish is served and the children are taught to sit down and eat properly, it will be much better for the children's health and manners.

Packing the Lunch
The secret of satisfactory packing are to keep all flavors separate and to prevent the food's being mashed.

Wax paper, paraffin cups or cartons, glass jars or glasses with closely fitted lids insure the separation of flavors. Sandwiches, cookies, and in fact, each article of food should be wrapped separately in wax paper.

Heavy things should be placed at the bottom and the container should be carried in the same position in which it is packed. Paper napkins and drinking cups should be included.

Cleanliness and neatness are essential. The lunch box or basket itself, and any glass containers used, should be scolded and sunned frequently. That will keep them clean and sweet.

Suggested Sandwich Fillings
Light bread is best for sandwiches. The bread should be cut in thin slices and buttered on both sides. What kind of filling is used. Dry bread or biscuit with a "slab" of meat does not make an appetizing sandwich. Secure variety in sandwiches by varying the size and shape; by varying the kind of bread; by varying the filling. Sandwich fillings should be seasoned mildly. Suitable fillings are:

1. Shredded lettuce or cabbage with salad dressing (brown bread).
2. Cottage cheese moistened with salad dressing.
3. Cottage cheese and peanut butter.
4. Peanut butter creamed with equal amounts of salad dressing.
5. Cold meat in thin slices.
6. Cold meat chopped fine, mixed with salad dressing.
7. Eggs, hard cooked, chopped fine mixed with salad dressing.
8. Lettuce spread with salad dressing.
9. Fig paste with nuts.
10. Raisins and nuts chopped fine.
11. Brown bread and butter.
12. Grated raw carrots, peanuts, salad dressing.
13. Chopped nuts or nut paste.
14. Dried fruit made into a paste by chopping and softening with milk or by steaming. Nuts may be added.
15. A little crisp bacon broken up in salad dressing (finely chopped lettuce or cabbage may be added).
16. Jelly, marmalade or preserves.

Cooked Salad Dressing
2 tablespoons flour.
2 tablespoons sugar.
2 teaspoons salt.
1 teaspoon paprika or white pepper.
1 cup salad oil or butter.
1 cup milk.
1/2 cup vinegar.
3 whole eggs.
1 teaspoon mustard.
Mix all dry ingredients, add butter or oil and cook to a paste over hot water. Add milk slowly and cook, stirring constantly until it thickens. Beat eggs slightly, pour the hot mixture slowly over the eggs, add the vinegar slowly, return to heat and cook until thick. It is done when it coats the spoon thoroughly. Turn into sterilized fruit jar, seal and put in cool place. This salad dressing will keep two or three months and is handy to use in preparing sandwiches.

'Bride Walks Out' Is Saenger Film

Barbara Stanwyck, Gene Raymond, Robert Young Are in the Cast

Three top-notch comedians are mercurially entangled in a marital situation, which affords untold mirth in Barbara Stanwyck's new starring film, "The Bride Walks Out," featuring Gene Raymond and Robert Young, and showing Thursday and Friday at the Saenger.

An independent bride (Miss Stanwyck) and her belligerent headstrong, young husband (Raymond) encounter Robert Young as a very rich playboy who befriends the couple and becomes attracted to the girl.

Complicating the situation is Miss Stanwyck's continual desire to return to work so that she can augment hubby's $35 a week and swathe her lovely lady in silks and satins. But conjugal love triumphs in the end.

"The Bride Walks Out" further benefits in performances by two of the screen's most popular "dead-pan" laugh-snatchers, Ned Sparks and Helen Broderick. The latter, who stood in the top rank of Broadway's comedienne before she was lured to Hollywood, has recently been seen in "Love on a Bet," in which Raymond was also featured.

Sutherland Picks Notre Dame Over Skibos

Carnegie Plays on Irish Home Field

Northwestern-Iowa a Tight Game—Ohio State to Beat New York U.

By JOCK SUTHERLAND
Pittsburgh's Head Coach

PITTSBURGH — Twenty-six football games, nine of an intercollegiate character, draw the attention of the country at large this week, not to mention innumerable battles of more or less sectional interest.

Notre Dame and Carnegie Tech launch the campaign at South Bend in a contest that should be worth going miles to see. Notre Dame always is formidable, but it perhaps is harder to defeat the Irish at home. This fact alone gives them somewhat of an edge, for the contest is being played on their campus.

Notre Dame will have to watch Carnegie Tech, however.

Wally Steffen and Howard Hargster have one of the biggest lines in the land. Behind this will be lure sophomore backs of great promise.

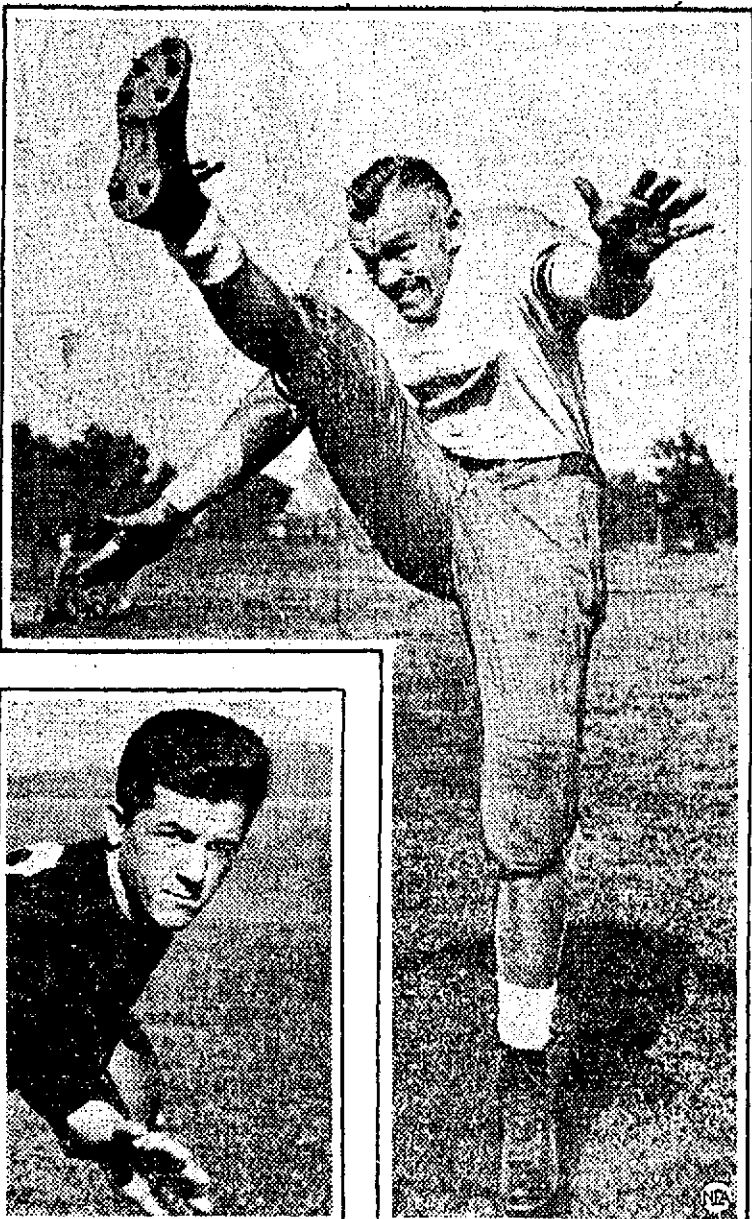

Notre Dame again has a wealth of manpower. The line is experienced. While Elmer Layden may miss kicking and punting strength of 1935, he will field a fine team.

I pick Notre Dame to win by a slight margin.

Plenty will happen when Iowa invades Evanston to once more have it out with Northwestern.

The superiority of the Northwestern line might be counted upon to hold

PLAY MAJOR ROLES IN SEASON'S EARLY FIRING

Football battles begin in earnest on all fronts as major teams open the campaign and many tackle opponents of equal mettle, Oct. 3. At left are two peerless passers, Sammy Baugh, above, of Texas Christian, and Floyd Blower, below, of California. Baugh chucks forwards against Arkansas at Fort Worth. Blower strives to stir up trouble for Saint Mary's College at Berkeley. Center, getting off a spiral, is Don Heap of Northwestern, who is to look after several assignments against Ozzie Simmons and his Iowa companions at Evanston. Inset is Quarterback Andy Pupils, who directs Notre Dame against Carnegie Tech at South Bend. Upper right is Leif Jacobsen, Oregon end whom Southern California probably will find pestiferous in Los Angeles. Below is Larry Kelley, captain and end, who leads Yale against a young Cornell combination at New Haven.

Yanks' Failings Indexed by Giants

Whole National League Turns Out to Help Giants' Pitchers

Last in a series of four daily stories about the World Series outlook.

By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK (AP)—Just how effectively Giant pitching will be able to turn back Yankee power in the coming World Series will depend, to a large extent, on the intelligence brought back by the National League's scouts who covered McCarthy's last raid through the west.

After the All-Star game this year, in which young Joe Di Maggio failed to get anything resembling a base-hit, the wise boys nodded and said, "Somebody knew something."

If that were true, Bill Terry and his huddling Terrers are fervently hoping that the boys bring back the correct information on all those fence-busters who move around in the Ruppert livery.

Espionage On the Diamond

It works like this: Bill Dickey strolls up to the plate and watches a high, wide one float by. The next is an in-curve and he smashes it into center-field for a hit. Peering intently at this operation are the National League's "Thin Men, who, lost in the crowd, are plotting the downfall of the Yanks. They make extensive notes in little black books, the sum total of which is, "Keep a low fast curve away from Dickey or he will kill it."

When the scouts come wandering in they'll pass this information on to Bill Terry. This is when the old Memphis professor will order a special quiz for his class of pitchers and receivers.

Every batting weakness (insofar as human eyes may perceive them) of their American league adversaries has been faithfully recorded, and it is this all-important information that the vest of the staff must familiarize themselves. The catchers and the pitchers always burn midnight oil before heading into a World Series. Probably they spend their waking hours mumbling such phrases as, "Never give the Yankees or a sucker a break" . . . "Keep 'em up around Di Maggio's ears" . . . "Watch Lazzeri on inside low ones."

Telespic Eyes

In other years the National League entry usually attended to its own scouting, but last season the league itself assumed this chore, drafting its best observers and giving them ample time to gather such information as is available.

These men have been after the Yanks hotter than G-men on the trail of a kidnaper suspect. They're smart hounds and they can spot a batting weakness from the center field bleachers.

If the Yankee wrecking crew does

Prescott to Play Smackover Friday

Curly Wolves Will Take on Powerful Buckaroos at Smackover Field

PRESCOTT, Ark.—Coach Rayburn Smith announced Wednesday that the Curly Wolves for their open date this Friday night had booked a game at Smackover with the powerful Buckaroos.

Smackover, with a formidable line attack and the best passing game seen in the southwestern end of the state this season, is certain to give Prescott a real reception when the Wolves invade the Union county oil town.

Smackover lost to Camden 25-6, but outplayed Hope last Friday night and was barely defeated 7-0.

Coach Smith was noncommittal about the showing of the Wolves next Friday night. He merely said that the team was still green, but with indications of improvement.

Virginia football fans will have a chance to see two left-handed passers this season—"Bud" Kovar of V. M. I. and "Buddy" Layless of the University of Virginia.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

The liver should pour out two pounds of bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas builds up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, weak and the world looks punk.

Laxatives are only makeshifts. A mass bowel movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get those two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." Harmless, gentle, yet amazing in making bile flow freely. ### Another "On the Job Test" . . . Another Ford Owner

Little Rock, Arkansas

Ford Motor Company,
Memphis, Tenn.

Gentlemen:

At the invitation of one of your local dealers, we tested one of your Ford trucks, hauling our regular loads, over our regular routes and driven by our own driver.

The route we picked for the test was one of our "toughest"—three trips daily, 200 miles over the roughest gravel and dirt roads, and up and down steep hills.

Despite these adverse conditions, the demonstration proved to us convincingly that Ford was the truck for the job.

Not only did we make the difficult run in much less time, but the low gasoline consumption amazed us. The driver was - and still is - highly enthusiastic over the truck's performance.

The demonstration sold us, and our subsequent operation records prove conclusively that the Ford V-8 truck is all that it is said to be.

Very truly yours,

West Virginia comes to Pittsburgh, and we expect the usual game with the Mountaineers. Trusty Tallman's outfit battles every inch of the way, and should his passing attack click, is likely to cause us several headaches. We should prevail by a comfortable margin, however.

Harry Stuhldreher at Wisconsin could wish for an easier foe than Marquette as he tries to get the Badgers moving. Marquette, because of experience, might be given the edge here. It will be close, also, at Michigan, but Harry Kipke's speedy backs are due to overcome that Michigan State jinx.

Nebraska ought to set out to claim another title in the Big Six by beating Iowa State.

The closest game on the coast will see California shading St. Mary's. The Bears will know that they were in a football game.

Washington State draws Stanford at Pullman. Because they're home, I give the Cougars a slight edge. An exceptionally well balanced Oregon team may give Southern California some trouble, but I look for the Trojans to come out on top.

break through to crush the Giants, it won't be because the pitchers didn't know what they were coming up against; it will be because they couldn't put the ball where it would do the most good. Or because, as some observers believe, the Yanks were too hot to be annoyed by any sort of pitching.

Another Question About CARDUI

MOTHERS RECOMMEND IT

Why do so many MOTHERS recommend Cardui to their daughters?

Isn't it but natural that any good mother should tell her daughters about Cardui if the mother herself felt that she had been benefited by this medicine?

It is impressive that so many women report having taken Cardui on the advice of their mothers.

Cardui has been found to benefit women when weakened by malnutrition ('poor nourishment') and it helps to relieve much discomfort at monthly periods.

Thousands of women testify Cardui helped them. Of course, if it does not help you, consult a physician.—adv.
